TEACHING EXPERIENCE/RESPONSIBILITIES:

I have been involved with teaching since becoming an instructor at the LSUHSC School of Public Health. I was integrally involved with the development of courses for the new MPH program. In 2004, I developed and taught the first offering of the Monitoring and Evaluation course for the school. The Louisiana Comprehensive Cancer Control Program has had a continuing education program for healthcare professionals since 2006 and I have directed that program. This includes developing the content and learning objectives for the program. In 2006, I began coordinating the practice experience for the Behavioral and Community Health Sciences program and participated with the interdisciplinary group that oversaw the course. This included working with students and preceptors on course objectives and evaluating the students' performances. In 2008, I added this responsibility for the Epidemiology program. In 2010, the Practice Experience (PUBH 6800) became one school-wide offering and I became course director. I worked to further refine the requirements for and objectives of the course until relinquishing it at the end of 2013. In 2009, I co-taught the course on community-based participatory projects for the Behavioral and Community Health Sciences Program. In 2010, I began teaching Behavioral Health Theories in Public Health (BCHS 6212). This is one of the core courses that all public health students must take. I teach it in the fall and summer semesters and retain full control and responsibility for all aspects of the classroom instruction and administration. It has been my intent to teach the students the materials they are expected to know should they wish to take the public health certification exam. This course is also a useful venue for doctoral students completing their teaching practicum; I allow these students and assist them to give lectures in the course.

Creation of Enduring Teaching Materials

July, 2010 - Dec, 2013 Developed and annually updated the manual for the LSUHSC School of Public Health practice experience. This was the first manual developed for the course as a step-by-step guide for faculty, students, and preceptors.

Formal Course Responsibilities

2016 Infographics in Public Health Independent Study (BCHS 6400), course director, 1 credit hour. This graduate level course is designed to teach the student how to develop and use infographics to convey public health information to a general audience. Includes knowing the audience, design and layout, and using data.

2010 – present Behavioral Science Theories in Public Health (BCHS 6212), course director, 3 credit hours, fall and summer semesters. This graduate level course is designed to expose students to the origin and use of behavioral and psychosocial theories in public health research and practice. Specifically, this course will explore how theoretical concepts, constructs, frameworks and models are utilized in developing, implementing and evaluating public health interventions.

2010 – 2013 Practice Placement, School of Public Health (PUBH 6800), course director, 3 credit hours, fall, spring, and summer semesters. The Practice Experience is a fieldwork project or activity that immerses the student in one or more aspects of public health operations under the guidance of a preceptor. Developed the first handbook for faculty, students, and preceptors.

2009 Community Based Participatory Programming (BCHS 6217), course instructor, 3 credit hours. This graduate level course introduces the student to the concepts of community-based participatory research and interventional programming in public health. This course presents concepts, models, techniques, and practices useful in developing a collaborative program.

2004 – 2005 Monitoring and Evaluation (EPID 6215), course instructor, 3 credit hours. The purpose of this graduate level course is to introduce the student to the concepts of monitoring and evaluation of community, health promotion, and other public health programs. This course presents models, techniques, and practices of designing and implementing program evaluation plans.
