ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Personal statement of research and research objectives

My research aims to answer critical questions and inform practice at the intersection of gender, sexuality, and health equity. I am a public health social scientist with a background in anthropology and gender and sexuality studies and a robust skill set of theory-informed mixed-methods research talents. I work from a queer intersectional feminist orientation, prioritizing collaboration, community-engaged approaches, and action-oriented interdisciplinary teams. My current research interests include Health equity and health disparities; HIV prevention and surveillance; substance use; transgender and non-binary health; sexual minority women's health; multi-level intervention development; sexual orientation, gender identity and expression (SOGIE) measurement; and health seeking behavior and healthcare access.
