NEWS

- On February 11, 2025, U.S. District Judge John Bates ordered the Trump administration to restore government health websites and datasets that had been removed due to an executive order. The nonprofit organization “Doctors for America” filed a lawsuit, arguing that the removal of this information hindered doctors' ability to provide evidence-based medical care. Judge Bates issued a temporary restraining order (TRO), requiring the relevant agencies to immediately restore the deleted web pages and to reinstate other affected health-related webpages within a specified timeframe.
